Stolen Vehicle Recovery

Theft: A Lucrative Business

A car is stolen in Malaysia every 30 minutes and in the world a car is stolen every 10 seconds.

No other type of criminal activity is as lucrative for such minimal risk as vehicle theft. Although security systems implemented in recent years on new models have enabled a slight decrease in the number of stolen vehicles, international criminal organisations use new methods such as car jacking and key theft to reach their objective. Another common attack to the vehicle is related to the intrusion into the compartment and theft of the contents.

Vehicle crime causes individual, social and economical damage.

Implications of Car Theft

Although the vehicle is probably insured against theft, this does not protect against:

- Stress and paper work hassle.
- Financial loss due to the insurance claims received is lesser than that paid for the vehicle.
- Loss of personal items (e.g. personalised number plate, high-end audio, house keys, etc).
- Loss of the means of transport during the insurance claim process that could take up to 6 months.
- Cost of replacement vehicle or alternative transport during insurance claim period.
- Loss of No Claim Bonus (NCB) increasing the cost of insurance premium.
- Price of new vehicle may have increased making it more costly to purchase a replacement vehicle.
